Military Technology Now Reducing the Spread of Sex Infections

Verification Technology Allows Instant Check of STD Testing Status

Miami Beach— January 14, 2019 — Avers and their SafeSexID program are using technology to make sex more efficient and, more importantly, safer!

The Problem... And the Solution!

Rates Of 3 STDs - chlamydia, syphilis, gonorrhea - Reach Record High, CDC Says. ... "It is time that President Trump and [Health and Human Services] Secretary [Alex] Azar declare STDs in America a public health crisis."¹

SafeSexID provides innovative, instantaneous and yet simple health verification solutions for responsible adults interested in living an overall healthier lifestyle, both for STD and also for the screening for illegal drug use. Using technology its parent company Touchstone Research Group LLC developed for the vetting of US Military veterans for their prospective employment as Department of Defense contractor-employees in conflict zones, Avers is now applying the same instantaneous verification technology to determine a potential sexual partner's STD testing status. Individuals can now confidentially verify their prospective partner's (with their partner's consent of course) recent Sexually Transmitted Infection (STI) screening status, information needed in the heat of the moment for that all important yea or nay decision.

Try the technology using your QR Code Reader (apps for your smartphone are freely available), a demo is available at their website's mainpage. One you shoot the member's QR code, in a few seconds you'll know your prospective partner's Diamond Rating (when they've taken their most recent STD tests), STI status, and verified photos.

Coming from the technology and military industries, the SafeSexID team is intimately familiar with issues surrounding confidentiality and sensitive information. Of the close to 100,000 military veterans Touchstone has verified over a dozen years, they have processed all safely and securely.

"We've expanded our market from 27 million US veterans, to social dating (120 million), "lifestyle" participants (13 million), the LGBT community (10 million), and sex workers (1 million), basically anyone who is engaging in non-monogamous sexual activity. Our program will particularly benefit those engaged in higher-risk sex." said Bayerle

Bayerle sees SafeSexID as a perfect opportunity to provide sexual health information within a very personal context: your test results. Along with information about safer sex practices, he wants to give everyone incentive to STI test and STI test regularly, thereby reducing the incidence of STIs and, consequently, improving society's health worldwide.
